Popla Cup — Admin Manual

Generated: 2026-11-12

A how-to reference for everything an admin can do in the app, grouped by section. It assumes you're already signed in with an admin account.

Getting around as an admin

Admin is a role on your account, not a separate login — there's no need to switch between "admin mode" and "participant mode". As soon as you're signed in with an admin account, the admin controls simply appear alongside the normal participant screens.

Open the menu (the icon in the top-right corner) to get around. Participants and this Manual only show up there for admins; Seasons, Matchdays and Account are visible to everyone who's signed in.

> If a page tells you "Your account isn't in the Admins group," ask another admin to promote you (see Managing participants → Promoting and demoting admins). The very first admin on a brand-new system is set up directly in the AWS console, not through the app — see README.md.

Managing participants

Adding a participant

Open Participants from the menu. Under "Register participant", fill in a Name and, optionally, a Phone number, then click Register.

- A phone number lets that person sign in themselves and makes them a full participant. They can't sign in until you give them a first password — see Resetting a participant's password below.
- Leave Phone blank to register a guest instead — someone with no login of their own (see Guests below).
- Tick Admin to make them an admin right away. This checkbox only unlocks once a phone number is filled in, since admin access requires being able to log in.

> You can also add a brand-new participant straight from a matchday's setup screen with "+ New participant", without leaving that page.

Editing a participant

Open Participants, click a participant's name to open their page, then click Edit. Change their Name or Phone and click Save.

> An admin's own phone number can't be changed from this screen (the field is disabled) — remove their admin status first, or make the change in the AWS console.

Guests

A guest is a participant with no phone number. Guests appear exactly like anyone else in a matchday's roster and day ranking, but are left out of every season-level ranking (season points, round winners, and the weighted ranking).

To turn a guest into a full participant, open their page, click Edit, fill in a Phone number, and Save — that's also what gives them the ability to sign in. Clearing a participant's phone number the same way reverts them to guest status.

> Season points keep accruing for a guest behind the scenes even while they're excluded from the ranking — promoting them later brings their full season total into view, nothing is lost.

Promoting and demoting admins

Open a participant's page (they need a phone number first), click Edit, tick or untick Admin, then Save.

- You can't demote yourself — that's deliberate, so the promote/demote screen never ends up unreachable because you were the only admin left. Ask another admin to do it instead.

- The very first admin on a system, or an admin not tied to any participant record at all, is set up directly in the AWS console rather than through this screen.

Resetting a participant's password

Open the participant's page and click Reset password (not shown for guests, who have no login to reset). This issues a one-time temporary password, shown right there on screen — use Share login to put it straight into a ready-to-send message.

The next time that person signs in with the temporary password, the app takes them straight to a "Set a new password" screen instead of logging them in directly.

> Anyone can also fall back on "Sign in with a code" on the login page themselves, without needing an admin at all — that's the quickest option whenever it's available to them.

Seasons

Starting a season

Open Seasons from the menu. If there's no active season, fill in a Name and Start date under "Start a new season" and click Create season.

> Only one season can be active at a time — "Create season" stays disabled while another season is still active. Close that one first (see below).

Viewing rankings

Click any season in the list to open its ranking page. Four tabs (a dropdown on narrow screens) cover Ranking (season points), Round winners, Weighted ranking, and Matchdays — visible to every signed-in participant, not just admins.

Closing and reopening a season

On a season's ranking page, click Close season and confirm. This finalizes the season — its matchdays, results, and rankings stay fully viewable afterwards, indefinitely.

Need to undo that? Open the closed season and click Reopen season — only possible while no other season is currently active.

> Closing a season doesn't delete anything — the records stay exactly as they were, they simply stop accumulating new matchdays until a new season is started.

Running a matchday

Creating a matchday

Open Matchdays from the menu and click New matchday — only available while a season is active. Fill in the Date, an optional Time, and the Tournament style (Mexicano, Mexicano Special, Americano, or Hanne Special).

- Allow self-registration: when ticked, participants can register or unregister themselves for this matchday right up until it starts. When unticked, only admins can add or remove participants. Either way, you can keep adding or removing anyone yourself at any time before it starts.
- Max participants (optional): caps the roster. Anyone joining past the cap — whether they registered themselves or you added them — is waitlisted instead of rejected, and automatically promoted when a confirmed spot opens up.
- Participants: tick as many people as you already know are coming — as many or as few as you like, including none at all. You can add more later from the matchday page itself. Use "+ New participant" here to register someone new on the spot.

Click Continue to create the matchday and open its page.

Managing the roster before the matchday starts

A matchday that hasn't started shows its registered list and waiting list to everyone, plus a "Finalize participants" box for admins: tick or untick anyone in that multi-select, add a brand-new participant with "+ New participant" if needed, then click Update roster to apply the changes all at once.

> This bulk editor is a shortcut for exactly the same add/remove actions self-registering participants trigger themselves — it's meant for reviewing and adjusting the whole list at once right before starting play, not a separate mechanism.

Starting play

Once the registered count is a non-zero multiple of 4, click Generate round 1. This locks in the current roster for good — anyone still waitlisted or who declined is dropped — and generates the first round's courts and pairings.

Running rounds

On a started matchday's Matches tab, each court shows its two teams. Click Edit (or the score fields appear right away for a fresh match) and pick each team's games won, then Save — a set is first to 6 games, no tiebreak, so any score from 0-6 up to 6-0 is valid.

Once every court in the current round shows a saved score, Generate round {n+1} appears — click it to re-rank, re-pair, and open the next round.

- Regenerate round: re-randomizes every court's pairing for the current round. Only offered while that round is completely untouched — the moment one score is recorded, reshuffling would discard a real result.
- Switch players: swaps two specific players' court/team slots within the current round, for whenever the generated pairing needs a manual tweak.

Replacing a participant mid-matchday

Once a matchday is underway, click Replace participant, choose who's leaving under Replace and who's taking their place under With, then confirm.

> This is a full identity swap for the entire matchday, including already-completed rounds — the incoming participant takes over every court, partner, and opponent assignment as if they'd been there from round 1, and the outgoing participant ends up with no trace left in that matchday at all (no stats, no day ranking position, no season points). Use it for a genuine "this person had to leave, someone else is taking their spot" situation, not for fixing a pairing — that's what Switch players is for.

Finishing a matchday

Once the current round's scores are all in, click Finish matchday and confirm. This finalizes the day ranking and adds season points (and, where earned, a winner point) for every participant — it can't be undone.

Editing or deleting a matchday

Before a matchday has started, click Edit (next to its title) to change the date, time, format, or self-registration/capacity settings — the roster itself is managed from the matchday page, not here.

Click Delete to remove a matchday entirely. Only the most recent matchday in its season can be deleted, and you must type that matchday's exact date to confirm. Deleting a finished matchday also reverses every season point and winner point it awarded.

> Everything about a matchday — including its match results — is exported before deletion, so nothing is lost outside the app even though it disappears from it.

Your own account

Open Account from the menu to change your own password at any time — fill in your current password and a new one, then Save. This is separate from resetting someone else's password (see Managing participants above).
